The lunch stop (at approx. midday) will be at the Grotto Pescatori in Giornico, a delightful spot on the banks of a mountain stream. In Biasca we return the cycles to the SBB and board a return train to Zug. Total distance of the ride is 40 km - the leaflet says '40 Kilometer rasante Abfahrt und ein Minimum an Muskelkraft'.

In case of bad weather you can confirm with Rudi Schaller up to 07.50 hrs on the actual morning.

-- THE BARBECUE - AS LIVELY AS EVER --

To the surprise of nobody, the evening brought midsummer rain. Towards the end of a May and June pockmarked with evening thunderstorms and daytime downpours, it would have taken brave money to bet on a dry, sunny evening on June 24, and the smart money was staying put. But everybody was there, having followed David Harris's balloon markers, including - amazingly - several who had not registered, bent on enjoying an evening in good company before a crackling log fire in the rustic comfort of the snug (and watertight) Sibirboden Waldhütte in the forest wilds of Unterägeri.

The rain soon stopped falling, but none of us noticed, and none of us cared, because the conversation noise inside quickly rose above the sound of any rain, or indeed of any thunder, which may have happened to be about, as the wine flowed and the meats began to brown on the grill. The sociable noise rose even above the sound of music, thoughtfully provided by our president, Ian Park. Tony the treasurer got into conspiratorial huddles with guests, like a usurer on the Rialto, to question their financial bona fides, but soon capitulated and joined in the fun. Tapes of the final of the Rugby World Cup still lay as warm in the videorecorders of the triumphant South Africans who were present as their own self-congratulations, but the losers, the New Zealanders, were quick to remind us of their monumental success in the America's Cup sailing.

As they left, late in the evening, members and their guests expressed their satisfaction and their full enjoyment of the food, wine and warmth, and of what had been a very bright evening spot amid the gloomy Unterägeri fir trees.

Car Treasure Hunt

The first IMCZ car treasure hunt on 21st May was a success. Drivers, navigators and other passengers, the youngest of whom was only two years old, helped gain points for the three attractive prizes. All nine drivers followed clues around the canton of Zug and had to answer some pretty challenging questions about the canton and Switzerland as a whole. The answers were so amazingly accurate that only 10 points separated the first four competitors in the final table. A couple of drivers (or their navigators!) misinterpreted one of the seven clues and wound up miles from the track, but they eventually realised that something must be wrong and got back to the correct route without having to open any of the emergency envelopes. The day was rounded off with dinner at the Restaurant Breitfeld between Rotkreuz and Meierskappel. Well worth a visit if you want to play a round of mini-golf on one of the best courses in Switzerland or visit the model railway in the barn next to the restaurant.

Other highlights of the day included the contribution of the organiser's new dog, Paddy O'Button, who, at the tender age of three months, turned out to be decidedly car-sick and at one stage, apparently tired of making a horrible mess, escaped from the car! True to character, he turned up at the entrance to the restaurant, figuring that that way, he couldn't really go wrong!

Congratulations to Hans Capiaghi and his wife on winning the first prize, to Hans Häcki, who almost won second prize but wound up with an ex-aequo first prize thanks to the contribution of his 8-year-old son Michael, and to Rudi Schaller who took the third slot. Thanks to all the others who didn't win a prize but contributed to an enjoyable afternoon and evening. And thanks, in particular, to Karen Schoepke (who, as a professional auditor, worked out all the final scores), and to David Harris, who, as so often, contributed a lot of his time and help to organising and marshalling the event.

(Reported by the organiser - Tony Button)

Editor's Note: Our thanks to Tony for generously donating the prizes to the tune of around Sfr 1000. We wish him luck with his new language school venture.

The Inaugural IMZC Golf Tournament

The sport is now really taking off in Switzerland. The IMCZ not wishing to be left behind by such a tidal wave is organising a Golf Tournament at the Burgenstock Golf Course on the 17th August 1995. There will be wonderful prizes such as the President's old putter, some user Golf Balls, but the main prize will be the honour of being crowned as the winner of the first IMCZ Golf Tournament.

To register simply call Ian Park (042) 772222. A full package of details will then be posted or faxed directly to you. Practice facilities are now widely available, so we expect to see you out there preparing for the big event.

-- NEWS IN ENGLISH --

SWISS RADIO INTERNATIONAL launched a new service six months ago, aimed, they say, at visitors to Switzerland, which has proved to be very successful in a more widespread way. It is broadcast live to Europe every hour from the Astra satellite, but it is available by telephone to all. It is and you can hear it at any time by calling 157 300 30 (at Fr.1.50 per minute). We thought our members might be interested, so we are enclosing a card about it.

-- STAMMTISCH --

Come to the Casino on any Thursday for an informal get-together around a table for a drink and a chat with fellow members. If you have a point of view to express, you will get murmurs of assent or an argument. Probably both. From 5:30 to 7:30 - if the weather is fine, the assembly may even venture out on to the terrace. Everybody welcome.

-- DO YOU WANT A GOOD DEAL? --

Why not look inside the Club Databank if you ~~are~~ looking for a commodity or a service. You may find what you want there, from a fellow member, and, perhaps, with benefits to both sides.

We look forward to seeing you at the bike ride and on Charity Day.

Sincerely,

For the Board of the IMCZ
Gwyn Bevan, Secretary
